

Project Managers – AASB

TECHNICAL EXPOSURE

INTERNATIONAL & DOMESTIC ACCOUNTING NETWORK

MELBOURNE CBD

The Australian Accounting Standards Board (AASB) is a federal government entity established to develop, issue and maintain Australian accounting standards. It contributes to confidence in the Australian economy and trust in external reporting by developing, issuing and maintaining principles-based accounting and reporting standards.

Following an organisational re-structure to better align mission and culture to the needs of business, the AASB is seeking Project Managers to work proactively under the direction of a Senior Project Manager and through them, the Technical Director on assigned projects. They need to be able to condense technical content into understandable, concise explanations, identify cross-cutting issues between assigned projects and make an effective technical or research contribution to international standard-setting activities on assigned projects.

These roles provide an excellent networking and relationship building opportunity.

To be successful, you require solid technical knowledge with expertise in specific areas highly regarded. You will apply this knowledge to the research and standard-setting process and identify and analyse key issues for resolution. You understand good corporate governance principles and practices and you have strong written, communication and presentation skills.

You are tertiary qualified, a Chartered Accountant or equivalent with at least three to five years of exposure to technical (accounting/auditing)] work or work in a related field. A postgraduate qualification or progress towards one is desirable.
